

Camel City Elite Prize Breakdown

History

The Camel City Elite races began in 2013 with a single race – the men’s mile. That first year, JDL offered up $1500 in first place prize money with $500 bonuses to those athletes breaking the magical 4:00 barrier. Cory Leslie won the inaugural event in 3:57.81, which at the time was the fastest mile ever run indoors in the state of North Carolina.

In 2014, the Camel City Crowd Fund was born and the races were expanded to include a women’s mile, men’s and women’s 800m and 3,000m races. Nick Symmonds headlined the event that saw nearly $20,000 in prize money and rabbits’ fees awarded.

In 2015, we again expanded the event and awarded $38,000 in prize money, rabbits’ fees and facility record bonuses. The event was headlined by Shannon Rowbury’s 4:22.66 mile, which is the 9th fastest performance EVER indoors. There was also an epic battle in the men’s mile that saw Cory Leslie prevail over Will Leer, Matt Elliott and Leo Manzano. In the men’s hurdles, Aleec Harris upset established stars David Oliver and Jason Richardson.

For 2016, JDL Fast Track is further increasing our commitment to the sport of track and field with over $60,000 of prize money, rabbits’ fees and facility bonuses available. The prize money breakdown is as follows:

1st Place - $4,000

2nd Place - $2,000

3rd Place - $1,000

4th Place - $500

In each event except the women’s mile, there will be a $1,000 facility record bonus available to the winner. Due to the extreme nature of our women’s mile facility record, we are offering a $1,000 bonus to the winner of the women’s mile if they break 4:30.00.

JDL Fast Track will also provide airfare and hotel accommodations for invited elite athletes. Participation requires attendance at the post-race dinner at the home of the owner of JDL Fast Track, including meet and greet with Camel City Crowd Fund Platinum supporters and Corporate sponsors.

Elite athletes wishing to compete in the 2016 Camel City Elite races should contact Craig Longhurst via phone at 336-722-2033 or via email at craig@jdlcastlecorp.com.
